If anything makes Britain great today it is the plurality of its people. The fantastic cultural mixture which gives this country such spirit and energy has been reflected in novels by writers such as Monica Ali, Hanif Kureishi and Meera Syal. Aiming to encourage unpublished writers whose stories reflect the true diversity of voices and experiences in this country, Penguin has teamed up with decibel, Arts Council England's cultural diversity initiative, to launch The decibel Penguin Prize. The best entries are collected here, in an anthology which showcases the work of some of Britain's most promising new writers.
